

The National Conversation on Education

Bray School Project NS Students Submission

We, the students of Bray School Project NS, want to share what feels most important to us about our school life and what we hope schools in Ireland will be like in the future. During a collaborative activity, we talked openly about what helps us learn, what gets in the way, and what changes would make schools even better for everyone.

Students enjoy art, PE, music, maths, and active lessons, and many feel supported by teachers. Some students appreciate the freedom in the classroom and say it helps them feel respected and taken seriously.

There are also things we would like to improve. Many students want more art, more PE and more sports activities. Some feel the school should be stricter about behaviour, especially in senior classes. Students also mentioned wanting better hot lunches and longer lunchtime.

For our future education, we would like more school trips, more extracurricular activities, better outdoor spaces, and new yard equipment. Some students also want more learning with technology.

We care deeply about our school community and want it to continue growing in positive ways. Our hope is that future schools will build on the things that already work well, while giving students more opportunities to learn actively, feel included, and have a real say in their school day.
